BLIMER is a simple and quite useful tool that allows users to remove unwanted parts of images using various presets. It is a basic plug-in that utilizes the IR filter to help users get their desired image in a more efficient way. Through the use of presets and basic adjustments, users can easily remove unwanted parts of an image, such as the entire sky or a part of the sea, and replace them with the desired color. Basic image compositing tool that allows users to remove unwanted parts BLIMER only relies on presets and lacks advanced features, but it comes with a rather simple and easy-to-use interface. When they have selected the base image, BLIMER will show a list of available presets that users can choose from. The available presets can be applied in various ways, for example, the sky could be replaced by the color of the base image or the entire image could be replaced by the desired color. After choosing an option, users can adjust the size of the area they wish to remove, which will in turn affect the size of the area that will be replaced. An undo and redo option can be accessed from the tool's buttons and they will have an effect on how many settings are retained. Additionally, a slider is used to adjust the intensity of the basic adjustments, which might prove to be useful to users who want to increase or decrease the number of replaced areas. The most common form of replacement is the replacement of the entire image. This is done by choosing the image color as a replacement, which applies a similar color to the entire base image. Intimate way to compose various images using presets and basic adjustments While the tool's interface could be considered to be simple and user-friendly, it offers a great way to compose various images with different colors and use them with various effects. If users don't have the patience to manually remove parts from an image, they can opt to use the tool, as it will offer them a quick and easy method to remove unwanted parts of an image and replace them with the base image. This is especially useful when certain areas have to be removed.
