ColorConvertz0r Download ColorConvertz0r Software Screenshot ColorConvertz0r Software User Interface ColorConvertz0r Software Features Embedded utility converts the color codes to all representations, mainly HEX, RGB, HSL, HSB, HSV, YUV, CMYK, Kcolor, Hansi, Generic, and others. It automatically calculates all types of color codes and can set the source and destination colors. A palette switcher makes it possible to change the color source within one program (convert color codes) or to export converted color schemes to files. Color temperature is also supported and even changeable. What's New New utility is now included in the standard install package for Windows 7. ColorConvertz0r Demo - Interactive Viewer ColorConvertz0r Download ColorConvertz0r is an application that is designed to help users perform online conversions of color codes, where in order to switch between the source and the target color of a web page or any graphic design, all you need to do is to input the color codes, choose the desired output format and you are ready to go. The target format does not have to be the same as the source. This software saves a great deal of time and effort. Colors can be matched using the help of various matching options, such as hue, saturation, and brightness. The same concept is applied to all color depths of both source and target formats. The color is determined from the color scheme of the source and the background. Features: ColorConvertz0r is a powerful utility that can be used to convert color codes online. Converts multiple colors in an image to any desired ones, always preserving the exact RGB value for the specified element. Download ColorResizer for Windows ColorResizer description ColorResizer is a powerful tool to create and edit stylish color palettes in the most creative way. In other words, it is a color palette generator, and it can be used to apply a set of colors to any visual target. It enables you to create and edit color palettes in the most efficient way. You can also edit color palettes visually, as well as define a color palette that is intuitively (and effortlessly) navigated. It is important to note that most of the other programs that enable you to create and edit color palettes fail to offer such control. This issue is addressed by ColorResizer. In order to learn more about the additional features, visit the official website. One of the most striking ColorResizer features is that you are not forced to create and edit color palettes manually, which can be time consuming and frustrating. Instead, it offers you an easy tool that allows you to run through several rounds in order to obtain a customized collection of colors. Once you are done with the exploration, you can save your collection or save and edit the current palette in the palette editor. This editor is intuitive and offers you numerous options, enabling you to modify the color palette, set the palette preferences, and more. Features: Create and edit colorful palettes in a most efficient way Set your preferred palette Import and export palettes Configure palettes Perform the exploration through several rounds Add colors to your palette Show all the palettes Maintain a database of palettes Share and get support One more ColorResizer top feature is that you will find the current palette and its options in just a few clicks. Highlights of ColorResizer: Features: Create and edit colorful palettes in a most efficient way Set your preferred palette Import and export palettes Configure palettes Perform the exploration through several rounds Add colors to your palette Show all the palettes Maintain a database of palettes Share and get support Simple and Intuitive The basic color palette editor of ColorResizer is simple and intuitive. ColorConvertz0r is a lightweight and portable software utility that you can use to convert color codes easily. It comprises simple and intuitive options that can be easily handled by users, regardless of their previous experience with such software. Download ColorConvertz0r Managing your software dependencies is a fact of life, and simply "getting by" means keeping your program, especially a Microsoft.NET Framework based program (like Visual Studio) from crashing on startup when it's missing some critical component. It's always good to know what dependencies are needed, because each new version of Visual Studio is automatically set up with the latest updates, and sometimes it can be a challenge to get your own version to work properly with the latest update. But rather than just trying to get your software to work, it's actually a lot easier to use a tool that does all this for you. Using dependency walkers, you don't have to worry about installing patches or updates, or getting the right combinations of MSDN or Codeplex or other versioning servers, and updates will automatically happen for you if they're available, including Visual Studio Updates. Plus, dependency walkers allow you to solve a lot of the problems that typically plague Visual Studio. For example, if you have an old MSDN release server, it'll tell you where the most recent version is, and you can choose which server you want to use, thus avoiding having to update your version to the newest patch or fix. Here are a few best-of-the-web dependency walkers that will help you stay up-to-date: Fenix Dependency Walker Has been around since 2004, and it is the first dependency walker to be developed within a non-Microsoft group. It's still in beta at the time of this writing, but it's quite easy to use and has many advantages over other dependency walkers. It has an "always up-to-date" feature that checks MSDN for the latest updates, and even upgrades if necessary. This feature is entirely customizable, and will force the tool to check every few hours for updates, or ask you whether you want to upgrade. It's one of the easiest dependency walkers to use. Arguably the best feature of this tool is that it is completely free, and does not require any installations or registration. It has a pretty nice user interface, with good colors and graphics. There is an option to switch between two views (the All Users
