What's New in the?

Capture screenshots from your desktop or take a video with your webcam. FFCamShow can be paired with a webcam. If it detects a webcam connected, it records screenshots and videos to social networks directly. It has a simple, intuitive interface. You can take screenshots with the help of gestures, and use the built-in webcam or your paired webcam to record video. To stop recording, just slide the finger down the screen. The application can be used for creative projects as well. You can apply your work directly on the captured picture. Even if the functionality is limited, the app is free. Currently the app is still in the beta stage. The current version is 1.0. It might contain bugs and is not yet fully featured. I am a total noob to programming and mobile development. I need some suggestions on how to improve the application. My plan is to integrate (or find) an open source C/C++ library that can create screenshots/videos and store them to a file system. I can not use C/C++ because I need to do some calculation on the screenshot files and it would be difficult to do so in Java and/or Obj C. I am not sure if I need a Lib or an SDK. I have researched these tutorials but I have not found something that works yet: A: If you are on iOS, then take a look at From the README: NSScreenShot captures a screenshot of the screen with a specific crop and saves the image to your project resources. Usage: `[NSScreenShot takeScreenShotOfRect:size:withScalingFactor:capturing:options:error:];` // crop by rect, scale to a specific size
