"Dragon Ball" Series Season
1 Part 1 1080p HD
x264-RARB GORE 01 - DBS - 97 : The first season of Dragonball Z aired from January to March 1992. It took the series to the United States, where they had to give the show a shot in English, and now there's a cut for those who want to watch it all in one-time again. It will put you in the dragon ball saga and you'll have to be ready to get a little bit sleepy. Learn more about Dragonball Z Season 1 here. Warning: it's a long and a bit slow of a series. If you think you like it, you will, but chances are you will want to quit this video after 10 minutes or so and then want to come back because you never got your money's worth. It's a long series, get used to it.

360 degrees in one window Vrap is a free 360 degrees viewer and player for Windows and Mac OS X. Play 360 videos and view large panoramas in one window. Vrap supports MOV, WEBM, MP3, OGG, GIF, TIFF, JPG and PNG files Ready-made views There are two views that you can use if you don't want to manually create a 360° frame: the Geometric and the Architectural. In the Geometric view, a rigid frame is applied to all the videos. It can be turned around. Free This app is absolutely free, free of charge, and available to download from the Internet and install in its original/native software versions, as well as from Google Play and the App Store. Features You can either drag and drop all the videos or load them from the File menu, which lets you manage your files directly from the desktop. The customizable panoramic pictures can be exported as 32x32, 48x48 and 64x64-pixel TIFF files or as JPEG pictures with no 360 effects. You can add a rotation to the currently loaded videos or pictures.

Vrap is available for free, as well as for the most common paid markets: the App Store and Google Play.

Basic: One of the most convenient features of Vrap is the fact that it can load all the images of a 360-degree video at once and then create a longish panoramic picture. You can also choose between viewing a 360-degree video with no effects or with all 360 effects, and if you want to create a custom 360-degree picture, you can select the Geometric or the Architectural view. Unfortunately, you can't load more than twenty videos at once, and there is no option to create custom 360-degree videos. You can save any of the videos as a simple or as a 360-degree panoramic picture. You can also export the selected file, including its individual parts, and there's also a built-in snapshot tool which makes it easy to capture certain images from the panoramic video. Average: You can either drag and drop all the videos

More Info About Vrap: Vrap Client (version 1.1.0) allows you to view 360-degree videos and pictures (up to 40,000x40,000 pixels). You can control a view with the mouse or, if you're more visually inclined, you can select one of the preset views. You can watch a 360 video in a couple of different ways: either by changing your perspective with an arrow in the corner, or by rotating your head. You can even create your own custom view. And if you want to take a snapshot of the 360 video scene, use the built-in snapshot tool. You can also export parts of the panoramic video or picture with the help of the built-in snapshot tool and save them to a folder or the clipboard. As for playing your 360 video or panoramic image, it has everything you need: play, pause, stop, rewind, fast forward, as well as sliders for volume and brightness. About poc I'm a person who loves his music which he collects. I love the smell of a vinyl record and the sound of a cassette. I love my family but sometimes I don't feel like being with them. I can't be sure why but it's more like a feeling. I call it loneliness. Which means that you can't see the future. You need to begin with some starting point (or some starting time) and then let it go
