Descargar activador mini kms office 2010 professional plus. [B80]. This would suggest that the left hemisphere plays a critical role in the encoding of brain states during sleep. Therefore, given the findings that dreams are chaotic, and their theta power is rather low, it is unlikely that during sleep there is a true cognitive processing. It is also possible that the putative critical role of the left hemisphere during NREM sleep may be related to its relative role in the processing of emotional information ([B76]) and the emotional modulation of memory consolidation processes ([B77]). Now, if we consider the age-related effects, we could hypothesize that people might remember the specific dream contexts when age decreases, thus reducing the dream variability. Conversely, the absence of this age effect in the occurrence of the dream, and the increased theta power during this event would be coherent with the hypothesis of a more cognitively meaningful processing during sleep. The age effect during recall could be due to the fact that older people remember more specific contextual information compared to younger people, or to the decrease in episodic abilities associated with aging ([B79]). The limitation of this study, is its cross-sectional design. It would be important to verify whether age-related differences in dream content and theta power are present also in longitudinal studies, and if these effects can be replicated in different contexts (e.g., daydreams). Conclusions ===== Our study provides evidence that the content of dreams differs significantly across younger and older people, but dream recall is preserved in aging. Moreover, we found that dreaming is associated with increased theta power in older adults. Taken together, these data suggest that dreaming could be a peculiar form of mental activity occurring during sleep, which may be related to the activity of cognitive processes, such as memory consolidation. Author Contributions ===== MM and SR conceived and designed the experiments. MM, AG, and SR performed the experiments. MM and SR analyzed the data and wrote the paper. All authors discussed the results and commented on the manuscript. Conflict of Interest Statement ===== The authors declare that the research was conducted in the absence of any commercial or financial relationships that could be construed as a potential conflict of interest. We thank Sandra Alessi, Michela Di Leo, and Eleonora Levi for their helpful comments on earlier versions of the manuscript. [*1]; Edited by: *T 570a42141b
