In the oil and gas industry, floating production, storage, and offloading (FPSO) systems are in common use today. However, systems with large storage tanks that hold liquid hydrocarbons are difficult and expensive to construct and these systems require high maintenance and have reliability problems. Production wells from oil and gas are expensive to service and take a long time to develop. Pneumatic conveying systems have been employed as an alternative to the large tank storage and the common FPSO systems. Since the storage tanks used with pneumatic conveying systems are much smaller than storage tanks used with tank storage systems, there are no storage tank problems due to heat or corrosion. Small storage tanks are easier and less expensive to construct and build and maintenance is much less expensive than that of the large storage tanks. Also, pneumatic conveying systems require significantly less manpower than oil tankers to handle incoming hydrocarbons and dispense the hydrocarbons to a pipeline. A pneumatic conveying system utilizes a compressor to pressurize and create a flow of gas with a low viscosity. A pipeline conveys the gas to a tank, and upon reaching the tank, the gas is dispensed into the tank. The pressure of the gas and the volume of the gas supplied to the pipeline vary with the amount of oil to be pumped into the tank and with the amount of oil or other liquid to be removed from the tank. When oil or liquid has to be removed from the pipeline and the pneumatic conveying system the fluid is conveyed to a separator tank. The separator tank has a separator located in the bottom that separates the liquid from the gas. The liquid is transferred from the separator tank to a storage container while the gas is discharged into the atmosphere. Pneumatic conveying systems have many advantages over other systems. The cost of a pneumatic conveying system is typically about the same as for the pipeline. Also, the storage tank is filled by a compressor connected to the pipeline. The connection pipe between the pump and the pipeline does not have to store a significant amount of volume of oil or gas. A pump can easily be located in a close proximity to the pipeline. The pipeline can be pressurized to a relatively high pressure. The pipeline can be constructed from the tank location to the tank location to increase the pressure and avoid storing the gas or oil in the pipeline. Also, the pipeline can be operated in a pressure kill mode or a bypass mode which causes the fluid to

Q: Makefile - wildcard based rule matching I have the following rule in my Makefile: `src: echo "- 'build' started" echo "- 'build' started" > $(TARGET) .PHONY: $(MAKE) src` This currently matches the pattern `src` if any file named `src` exists. Now I want it to match the pattern `src` if any file named `src.` exists. How can I achieve this? A: Try `src_` EDIT: added redundant.PHONY rule as first rule EDIT2: If you want to do this in the directory that Makefile resides in you can do: `.PHONY: $(MAKE) -C. src_*` Otherwise you'll have to add this as the first rule of your Makefile. Q: Probability of drawing n cards, in order, from a standard deck of 52 cards. In a standard deck of 52 cards numbered in the order 1, 2, ..., 52, what is the probability that a random card, in order, from that deck is: 1, 2, ..., n I want to know how to calculate this probability. A: The probability that 1 is drawn is $\frac{1}{52}$. The probability that 2 is drawn is $\frac{1}{51}$. The probability that 3 is drawn is $\frac{1}{50}$ The probability that n is drawn is $\frac{1}{48}$. So, your probability is: $\frac{1}{52} + \frac{1}{51} + \frac{1}{50} + \dots + \frac{1}{48} = \frac{1}{52} + \frac{1}{49} + \frac{1}{48} \cdot \frac{1}{48} \cdot \frac{1}{48} + \dots + \frac{1}{48} \cdot \frac{1}{48} \cdot \frac{1}{48} \cdot \dots + \frac{1}{48} = \frac{1}{52} + \frac{1}{49}$
