Q: How do I cast this struct to the type of the one being used as a parameter? I have a struct, let's call it MyStruct. I make an instance of MyStruct, then I want to pass that instance into a function that accepts the parameter of that struct and cast it so the function can operate on it. What's the best way to do this? Basically, the solution should look like this:

struct MyStruct {
  var id: String
  init(string id: String) { self.id = id

---

} } var myStruct = MyStruct(string: "foo") func isValidWithParameter(customer: MyStruct) { if customer.id == "foo" { // do something } else { // do something else } }
I tried: isValidWithParameter(customer: customer as! MyStruct) and isValidWithParameter(customer: customer as MyStruct) Obviously, neither of these work, but I would like to know if either of these are viable options and if so, why they don't work. A: MyClass is a protocol.
protocol MyClassProtocol {} struct MyStruct: MyClassProtocol { var id: String
init(string id: String) { self.id = id } }
Now you can call any function on MyClass, only they must be declared to accept an instance of this protocol. func callProtocolFunction(f: MyClassProtocol, customClass: MyClass) {} callProtocolFunction(
