

“The speed and intensity with which players operate in the match as compared to real-life makes for an exceptional, unique gameplay experience,” said PES Lead Producer, Markus Flierl. “In our very first gameplay demo released at E3 we used this data to simulate the energy, agility and speed of on-field action. HyperMotion also brings with it a deeper level of expression in terms of player movements and even the weight of the ball.” HyperMotion Technology also makes its debut in PES 2019. “Teamwork is key to scoring goals,” said Flierl. “When you combine the speed of a great ball through-ball, combined with the movement of your teammates, it is the element of magic we wanted to recreate. In PES 2019, with the added benefit of ground-breaking HyperMotion technology, it’s even more impressive to see the natural fluidity of ball movement and teammate collaboration throughout a match.”

2) Goalkeepers. With Goalie Knocker, goalkeepers can use the R3 button to drop into mid-field for an aerial pass with teammates. Goalkeepers can also perform passes towards the post, keeping defenders on the backfoot.

3) Goals. FIFA has added Goal Impact Lines, which show the arc of a shot at the goal line.

4) Injuries and The Transfer Market. FIFA’s Transfer Market now has more robust functionality to handle the entire transfer process. For example, players can apply for preseason loans and when players apply for those loans they will be presented with their transfer options based on their wage. For Clubs looking to buy players, they can bid on a player’s contract and see exactly how much they’ll cost for the duration of the loan. In order to build a stronger bond between the club and the player, clubs are given more control over the loan. Clubs can assign and transfer players back from a loan, and they can encourage loan players to move permanently to their clubs. There are more ways for clubs to create a stronger bond with their players and the loan market works in a more nuanced way to achieve those goals. In the same vein, teams can now make bids during the transfer market to sign players who are not playing for their team anymore. If the player is not playing and wishes to return to their
