Current studies on human retroviruses will be extended to include other human viruses including the polyoma and herpes viruses as well as primate lentiviruses and other human as well as human retrovirus-like human viruses. In addition to existing complement fixation (CF) tests using enveloped free virus antigen, a potentially avid CF test will be developed based on the identification of human retrovirus type-specific antigenically active free virus. Such free virus will be identified by human sera which recognize envelope proteins on permeabilized target cells in which viruses replicate and release envelope protein or by such human sera which recognize envelope-specific antigens of free virus-containing human plasma membranes. Virus protein and antigen specificity will be established by using labelling viruses with 125I, 3H, and 35S. In addition, some free virus particles (e.g. from syncytium-forming human viruses) may be found

I can't add the current application or the application window to my list. They just don't add. I have a main.cpp where I initialize the list. In that list, I have a second.cpp where I have a function called getApplications that creates a list with all the applications in the system. In the main.cpp I try to create some elements, but the operation is not successful. For this to work I need something like that : auto it = list.begin(); *it = app; I'm doing my research, and you told me that to do that
