During the first game of the National Lacrosse League final, Kodiak Bears' fans threw what now looks to be very, very delicious purple and gold Carabao Cup sweaters at their team's opponents, the Calgary Roughnecks. We get that it might be a little character building to hurl your team's mascot at the other team, but these Kodiak fans saw no problem doing so, yelling "Cowabunga" at their lone defender as they sent him hurtling into the stands. You know what wasn't character-building? The around-the-clock stream of "Cowabunga" spamshots into the Red and White Bar. And this is a Red Tape Lacrosse Blog. Now that we have your attention, please stop trying to make the game of lacrosse better by pouring beer into

The game is a point-and-click type game where you can walk around in environments that are reminiscent of a comic book. A grand story of power and empire, complete with heroes, villain, corruption, love, betrayal, and many more.Effects of repeated intracerebral bicuculline injections on quisqualate-induced behaviour in rats. To study the influence of bicuculline (BIC) on its own behavioural effects, repeated intracerebral injections of BIC were carried out and quisqualate (QUIS)-induced behaviour was studied in rats. BIC injection (10 micrograms) was accompanied by a minor elevation in body temperature of the rats, an ipsilateral tail-flick response to heat stimulation and an increase in the duration of the righting reflex. Repeated BIC injections (3 x 10 micrograms) enhanced the behavioural responses induced by 3.75 micrograms QUIS, but not by 4.0 micrograms. Morphine (1 mg/kg) or diazepam (5 mg/kg) significantly decreased the righting reflex evoked by 5.0 micrograms QUIS in rats previously injected with BIC. After repeated BIC injections, the (1-10 Hz) synaptic potentials induced by QUIS (3.75 micrograms) were suppressed for up to 6 days. This suppressed potential could be fully reversed by 5.0 micrograms QUIS. These findings suggest that the QUIS-induced behavioural changes in rats are a consequence of changes in the synaptic efficacy.Nasal chemosensory function in asthmatic subjects. Nasal chemosensory function was studied in eight non-atopic control subjects and 20 asthmatic subjects. There was no significant difference in the sensitivity of each subject to the chemical stimulants tested between the two groups. The nasal volume threshold of subjects with allergic rhinitis was lower than that of the non-atopic control subjects. Nasal airway resistance and responsiveness to all chemical stimulants studied were also higher in the allergic rhinitis patients. These findings show that nasal airway resistance is not a major factor in the development of allergic rhinitis. The low nasal volume threshold for all stimulants was thought to be due to the constricted and congested nasal airway of the allergic rhinitis patients.Thursday, April 24, 2012 Heard of Rockstar Social Club. MPE1: How Donald Trump Is Dividing and Then Divorcing Labor Who would have thought meeting Donald Trump at a meeting of failed businessmen could have been fruitful, well it was fruitful for me. I was a guest at the Trump Organization's meeting to discuss how its Mission: Public service corporate partnerships could improve the quality of the Trump International Hotel & Tower Condominiums...you know, my building. In other words, I was given a taste of how the Don (again, I could not call him that, he obviously hates the word) planned on turning his hotels into some kind of public service corporate partnership. Unfortunately for Donald and his cohorts, they didn't stand a chance. I have been a huge supporter of the Donald Trump/Trump Organization. Yes, they are not perfect, and yes there have been instances of racism, and misogyny, but geez, am I the only one that isn't rolling on the ground laughing at these people? The top level of the Trump Organization has been going around to various corporations asking for their support. So this video is Trump and some top level executives of the Trump Organization having a meeting for The Trump Organization to discuss their goals for becoming a Trump centered public service club. The video begins by Ivanka Trump (and she is outfitted in a very nice dress for a change) who literally utters the word "country" like it is her most precious and important word. She also speaks about "serving" instead of "working" well, a rather good opinion about how Trump thinks the best way to help America is to not follow her old business ethics but to follow business ethics that are much like China's. Oh, and these business ethics allow no one to ever go bankrupt, once and for all prove it. The video goes on to present a very sophisticated "public service" front. We have a council like the UN, instead of top level executives, in other words a middle management for the whole thing. Public service is easy. How can you help the community? Volunteer your time, donate a few dollars, do some fundraising of some kind or maybe now, allow your employees to donate their time working at the airport. Oh wait, that last one does not sound quite right. Instead of volunteers for some public service events, events that raise money for the community we have more escapist
