Magyar Windows is a PHP and MySQL development platform for Windows.This week, some states that were not hit particularly hard by Hurricane Irma are getting some relief — while parts of the United States still remain on alert for the destructive potential of Hurricane Michael. For the entire week, NOAA's Climate Prediction Center has positioned Michael in the D-3 storm surge designation, a priority for areas along the coasts of the Great Lakes and the southern Gulf Coast. Hurricane Irma had landed a direct blow on Florida, the Bahamas and parts of the Caribbean, and is still making its way toward Europe. As of Tuesday, no victims or records of damage were known in the US. The glacial Atlantic floods that Hurricane Michael left behind in its wake in the Panhandle had battered coastal Florida and Georgia. But as of Tuesday, Florida was still recovering. There were also reports of debris flow on parched land in Alabama and West Virginia, as well as three deaths associated with flooding and strong winds in Florida. Authorities in six counties in southwestern North Carolina said they had received 2,000 calls and complaints about the damage caused by Michael. Flooding even forced the Coast Guard to rescue a couple in a trailer as it slowly floated in the waters off North Carolina. In Georgia, there were some more reports of water-borne debris along the state's coast and inland rivers. After slamming into the Caribbean, the storm is expected to eventually hit Cuba and Florida. On Tuesday, the National Weather Service in Miami said the core of the storm was about 150 miles away from Florida's east coast. The hurricane is a storm of "catastrophic intensity" with winds of sustained maximum winds of 185 miles per hour and gusts of up to 215 miles per hour, the National Weather Service's Miami office said. And while some nerves are on edge, some parts of Florida have been catching up on sleep. Earlier this week, US President Donald Trump posted a video that had been produced for him by First Lady Melania Trump that showed the the couple's private residence in Florida's Jupiter, while the president was in Davos for the World Economic Forum. According to Trump's assistant, who spoke on
