Meet Kim, a science-loving lady who's studying medicine, is learning to cook and is planning to document life on an Australian sheep and beef farm. To my mind the most important skill a woman needs to have is empathy. People, especially men, assume that women will never understand. By treating women as though they cannot understand, or will not be able to do any more than talk about their feelings, they achieve a lot of success. By Marie-Helene Donaldson, Consumer & Business Editor There is much to say about the way our society treats women. It is time to stop the yapping. But when I sat down to write it down, I realised that I was accused, at the very least, of hating women. I'm really not. I am angry with the behaviour of some men, but it is not just men, I am angry with the general attitude of our society. We are all to blame. The fact is, if you go to a restaurant or coffee shop, or anywhere men and women come together, a man can be sure his girlfriend will be sitting by him. If he has a wife with him, he is automatically assumed to be with his girlfriend. It is the only safe assumption to make, because a woman is not permitted to sit there by herself. If the meal is in a restaurant, she might be allowed to sit at the table with her date. In my opinion, this is a bad thing. I believe it is so disrespectful that a woman should be on a date alone: she should be sitting with her husband or the person she is having a one-on-one conversation with. When it comes to dinner conversation, men and women don't talk about the same things. If a man and his wife are at a dinner party, chances are they will talk about the same things. Men talk more about sex, relationships and love, while women talk more about getting ready to get married, the problems they have with their husbands, and their children. But if a woman goes out with her girlfriends for a coffee and a catch-up, the single men fall over themselves to help her out because she is waiting for a man to escort her. But what if she is waiting for a man to accompany her to a restaurant? She may go there in order to be with her friends, but she will be sitting at the table alone. This is another bad thing, especially if she is waiting for her husband. That is where feminism comes into the picture. Feminists
