I can figure this out if I know the line number of the last line. But I really don't know, for example, if there are more than five lines in this code block. How do I get the last line of a code block of any type? A: How do I get the last line of a code block of any type? Use the r command. For example, assume this string ## # # # # # # # # and I wanted to find out which line was the last one: r # This will print the name of the section followed by the line number (the position of the last semicolon in the section). This also works with macros: r #macro:xyz will give the section and line number of the last statement in that macro. Further reference: Unix r help page r intro .
