Evaluation of Mitoxantrone and Daunorubicin in the Treatment of Acute Lymphoblastic Leukemia: A Pilot Study. A pilot study to compare the efficacy and toxicity profile of mitoxantrone versus daunorubicin in the treatment of acute lymphoblastic leukemia (ALL) was conducted. The pilot study assessed retrospectively 9 ALL patients treated with mitoxantrone 12 mg/m²/d x 3 and daunorubicin 30 mg/m²/d x 3 over a 3-week treatment course. Patients were all of age less than 60 years with a median age of 33 years (range: 18-58 years). The characteristics of 9 patients were as follows: median age of 33 years (range: 18-58 years); 8 males and 1 female; 5 cases of the B-lineage and 4 cases of the T-lineage. C-ALL was the most common ALL subtype (n = 7). All patients were in the first complete remission (CR1) at presentation. Seven patients achieved morphologic CR (mCR), and 2 patients achieved mixed CR. A median of 1-2 courses were given for these 9 patients and 10 courses for the 6 patients who achieved CR (85%). The median duration of complete remission in 9 patients who reached CR1 was 6 months (range: 4-9 months). The median duration of complete remission in the 6 patients who achieved CR was 7 months (range: 3-14 months). Two patients have relapsed. None of the patients developed evidence of congestive heart failure. We found mitoxantrone to be a reliable and effective drug for the treatment of ALL at doses of 12 mg/m²/d x 3 and daunorubicin at doses of 30 mg/m²/d x 3. This invention relates to a multiplex drive circuit for driving a plurality of light emitting elements simultaneously and more particularly to a multiplex drive circuit for driving multiple light emitting elements, formed on a common substrate or a single package substrate, to emit light in predetermined color ranges on a single screen by a single horizontal scanning time.
