WATCH: Prepared statement in the case of the 8-Year-Old Porn Videos in the Yorkie's Phone Story Highlights A man is in the York County Prison charged with producing and distribution of pornography involving an 8-year-old boy The York County District Attorney's office said it is not releasing any names or other identifying information for the boy involved, and that the family is staying anonymous JACKSON, Tenn. -- A man from Jackson, Tenn., faces multiple charges related to the production, distribution and possession of child pornography in an investigation by York County law enforcement. Jonathan Wayne Nuss, 24, was charged on Thursday by the York County District Attorney's office. He is accused of producing and distributing pornographic images of child pornography involving an 8-year-old boy, of which Nuss has admitted to producing and distributing. According to the criminal complaint, a York County Sheriff's Office detective received a search warrant for Nuss' residence on December 12, 2016, and during the course of the search, Nuss admitted to making child pornography involving the 8-year-old boy. On January 10, 2017, the detective received a search warrant for a computer at the residence to look for other pornographic videos of a child. Further investigation by the detective turned up five child pornography videos that allegedly involved the 8-year-old boy, according to court documents. The child pornography was on a computer at the home that was owned by Nuss' roommate, according to court documents, and was also found on a flash drive belonging to Nuss. On May 3, 2017, Nuss was charged with two counts of production of child pornography in Decatur and Cumberland counties. Nuss was also charged with an additional charge of distribution of a sexually explicit image or photographic material involving a minor. He is being held in the York County Prison on a $350,000 bond.
