Create talking books easily - quickly and easily create talking books with the all-in-one digital talking book creator. It's a real pleasure to use Audacity to edit your voice recordings in order to tailor them to the exact requirements of your text and braille device. There are many steps to these tasks but they are all very easy. 1) Loading audio files into Audacity You can use the audio files that you have already created in Dragon NaturallySpeaking to begin editing them, or you can easily add new audio files to your project using the Audacity tab in the Dragon NaturallySpeaking interface. 2) Generating braille files If you select the Braille option in Audacity you will be prompted to install the Braille Embossing plugin in Audacity. The plugin provides text braille generation for Microsoft Windows and Mac OS X. If you are using Windows OS, you will need the latest version of the Braille Embossing for OS X plugin. After the installation, you will be prompted to select a Braille font. 3) Adding voices to a narration You can add voice files using the Standard Audio type or the Title type. In order to add text, you can select either the Text Type or the Standard Audio type. 4) Capturing pauses and voice transitions The second part of editing the narration involves capturing pauses and voice transitions. You can use short or long durations of silence for all of the intervals between the voices of the narration. Your edited narration will now be ready for translation into braille and embossing. 5) Publishing your finished narration After completing the edit, you will be able to publish the narration on the Narrator tab in the Dragon NaturallySpeaking interface. The published text braille files are ready for translation and embossing when you publish them to your Dragon NaturallySpeaking library.
