Kansas City Chiefs running back Spencer Ware was named the NFL's Walter Payton Man of the Year on Tuesday for his work with several organizations in the community and on the field. Ware, 26, spent much of his time over the last year trying to raise awareness about the need to help families who are at risk of losing everything because of family violence, including the You Can Run Project. The You Can Run Project is a program that teaches individuals how to run a race in order to raise awareness and funds for the non-profit organization. It's a way for individuals to take charge of their own life, while giving back to the community. Ware teamed up with the You Can Run Project in 2016 and it was a success, in large part because of the emotional weight of the topic. Ware asked several runners who were at a high risk of being killed in the line of duty to run in the Race for Life, and many were able to overcome the odds and finish. "I've been able to make a real impact on the Kansas City community and the world," Ware told the media, according to The Kansas City Star. "[Our organization] has been able to work with the You Can Run Project, which has had a huge impact, and it has been a real impact in terms of getting people to talk about the issue." Ware was also honored as the 2017 Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year. The award honors an active NFL player
