Inhibitory effect of the nitric oxide donor sodium nitroprusside on voltage-sensitive calcium currents in guinea-pig hippocampal neurones. The effect of nitric oxide (NO) donor sodium nitroprusside (SNP) on voltage-dependent Ca^{2+} currents was investigated in guinea-pig hippocampal neurones. Ca^{2+} currents were recorded with the whole-cell patch-clamp technique. Voltage clamp recordings showed that SNP (1-100 μM) reversibly decreased the amplitude of Ca^{2+} currents in a dose-dependent manner with an IC_{50} value of 7.4 μM . SNP reversibly inhibited the inactivation of Ca^{2+} currents. The inhibition of Ca^{2+} current was independent of the presence of extracellular Mg^{2+} and was voltage-dependent. SNP did not change the $V_{1/2}$ value of inactivation of Ca^{2+} currents. SNP did not change the steady-state inactivation curve of Ca^{2+} currents in either the presence or absence of extracellular Mg^{2+} . These data suggest that the inhibition of Ca(2+) current by SNP may be due to the direct inhibition of Ca(2+) channel function and subsequent inhibition of Ca(2+) influx. National Association of Manufacturers Poll: Optimistic about 2012 From the day after the presidential election, the National Association of Manufacturers was enthusiastic. The group predicted that 2012 would be a “normal year,” despite the disappointing results for the nation’s new president and Congress in November.
