Safar recently shared his thoughts about the archery classification system with World Archery. Safar is the first person ever to win an Olympic medal and gold in archery – winning gold at the 2016 Olympics in Rio de Janeiro, while also being the first non-European to do so. He revealed he believes the archery classification system should be upgraded, and also shared why he struggles to make it to international level tournaments. World Archery athlete development manager George Selig gave Safar some advice on several things, such as his set-up, preparation and strategy. “If we [Safar] can make it to the Olympic Games, we will be the first African and non-European to do so. I was always confident I could win the gold medal. I think [Safar]’s goal is first to qualify for the Olympics,” Selig told World Archery. “During the 2013 World Championships in Sharjah, we were defeated by Japan 2:1. That’s the worst moment in my life. “I was watching the archery competition and crying, thinking that everything we’ve worked for could be over after that. I think we need to get rid of the FITA [Federation Internationale de 6d1f23a050
