MgxV9uN Ronald N. Thompsom, interview audio legend, March 16th, 2013 14:30:00

Ronald N. Thompsom, a pioneer in the worlds of audio recording and sound reproduction, died Tuesday, March 16th, 2013 at the age of 97. He was a founding member of the Audio Engineering Society (AES) in 1936, and served as its president from 1966 to 1969. He was a renaissance man, unafraid to dabble in many forms of art, and he always remained a free thinker. He enjoyed the camaraderie of fellow enthusiasts. He was born March 16, 1913 in New York City to William S. Thomson and Susannah n. Thompson. He was a child prodigy, and early on, became a ham radio operator. When he was only 12 years old, he had built his own radio transmitter in his grandmothers shed. When his father William Sr. died in 1929, Ronald lived with his maternal grandfather, Eli Eliassen, in Englewood, New Jersey. It was there that he began his professional career as an audio engineer. He was also involved in many cultural pursuits, including classical violin, sewing, woodcarving and other hobbies and skills that would keep him occupied all his life. In 1935 he earned his B.A. at the Wharton School in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He earned his M.S. in electrical engineering from the University of Pennsylvania in 1938, and he later earned a Ph.D. in electrical engineering at the University of Minnesota in 1942. After serving in World War II as a captain in the U.S. Navy, he became a professor of electrical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He remained
