I currently have the code below that reads the data I want to return and stores it in a data frame `sqlTocar = sqlTocar %>% sql_connect() %>% sql_exec("SELECT * FROM Table1")` where the data that comes back is always different and I want to add a column to the data that tells me if the value was a match or not. The data set has an int column that specifies 'True' or 'False' to indicate whether it was a match or not. I then proceed to convert the data from the SQL query into a dataframe with this line of code `sqlTocar = sqlTocar %>% sql_connect() %>% sql_read() %>% sql_exec("SELECT * FROM Table1")` but I am unable to extract the data from this sql query with the `data[sqlTocar,]` statement. My guess is the SQL query that I am doing is wrong as the table column is technically a varchar. `sqlTocar = sqlTocar %>% sql_connect() %>% sql_6d1f23a050`
