apparatus for use with an electronic shelf label system. Electronic shelf label (ESL) systems can be used to identify consumer products. An ESL system typically includes an electronic tag that is mounted on the product itself. The tag contains a unique identification number associated with the product. The identification number can be used by a checkout clerk to identify the product and associate it with a price for the product. The ESL system may also provide various types of promotional information about the product to a consumer. An ESL system typically includes an ESL panel that is mounted to a store shelf and that displays an identification number of the product.

The ESL panel is associated with the checkout counter of the store where the product is purchased. The ESL system is typically connected to a host computer that serves as a central repository of information about products in the store.

This information includes price information that is provided to the checkout clerk when the checkout clerk enters the product identification number of the product into the host computer. ESL systems can also provide promotional information to the consumer regarding the product. ESL systems have been developed for use with consumer products that require different size of labels. However, existing ESL systems have limited flexibility and functionality. For example, existing ESL systems have limited capability to provide special offers to a consumer regarding the product.

Q: PDF Mail Merge Problem I'm trying to send a confirmation email after an order is placed, and the order doesn't get on
